Senate Releases COVID-19 Proposal

The Senate recently reached an agreement with the White House for another COVID-19 relief bill and the bill’s language is expected to be released soon. This kicks-off negotiations with the House of Representatives, with the goal of passing a final legislative package before the Congressional August recess. Below are the policies that are included in the Senate’s proposal.

Adopt liability protections for health care providers. The proposal extends liability protections to health care providers for issues related to COVID-19. To prevail, plaintiffs must show that the provider was grossly negligent, engaged in willful misconduct, and violated relevant state/local public health guidelines in place at the time the incident occurred. Although extending liability protections is a priority to Senate leadership, the House has already expressed opposition to this policy.

Appropriate $25 billion for the Provider Emergency Relief Fund. Although the proposal does not include an additional $100 billion for the Fund as requested by AHPA and other organizations, it does provide additional funds. The proposal also includes:

- $25 billion for COVID-19 testing.
- $26 billion for vaccine research, distribution and use.
- $1.3 billion for workplace training on social distancing.
- $15.5 billion for NIH labs/research.
• $4.5 billion to SAMSA for mental health, suicide prevention and overdose response programs.
• $7.6 billion for Community Health Centers.

Grant additional time for providers to repay CARES’ Act Medicare Accelerated Payments. The proposal extends the time for providers to repay the Medicare Accelerated payments received under the CARES Act until January 1, 2021. The interest free repayment period is also extended for an additional four months as well.

Extend telehealth reimbursement policies, without making waivers permanent. Although the proposal does not make any of the COVID-19 telehealth waivers permanent, it does extend them until the end of 2021.

Extension of enhanced unemployment benefits. The proposal extends the enhanced unemployment benefits previously approved by Congress but those benefits will likely be lower than $600 a week. The Senate wants to adopt a new federal unemployment benefit that would cover 70% of the wages a person was previously earning; a cap would probably also be adopted.

Other Congressional Efforts

Below are other parallel efforts taking place in Congress that could potentially be incorporated in a final COVID-19 legislative package or future legislation. Other top policies being promoted by health trade groups can be found here.

House Ways and Means Committee releases a discussion draft to promote telehealth. The draft legislation would make permanent several of the current COVID-19 waivers, including the removal of the originating site requirements and allowing various clinicians to provide telehealth services.

House committees seek to tackle health disparities. COVID-19 has exposed the significant health disparities present in our nation. In an effort to better understand and address those disparities, the House Ways and Means Committee recently released a report that outlines systemic barriers to health. The Energy and Commerce Committee has also hosted several hearings on the issue of health disparities. Future legislation is expected on this issue, whether it is included on the COVID-19 relief bill or not.

Senators introduce legislation to waive 340B eligibility requirements. A bipartisan group of six senators introduced legislation to waive 340B eligibility requirements for hospitals participating in the program during the COVID-19 pandemic. This policy is also being promoted by most health trade groups.
Joe Biden’s Health Care Recommendations

As the 2020 presidential election approaches, former Vice President Joe Biden continues to make health care central to his campaign. Along with his existing health care platform, Mr. Biden has released additional policy recommendations on strengthening the American health care system. These recommendations, developed in collaboration with Senator Bernie Sanders and a cabinet of health policy advisors, provide additional insight into Mr. Biden’s health care priorities. President Trump is also expected to unveil his health care platform soon. Below is more on Mr. Biden’s health care platform and the new health policy recommendations.

Mr. Biden’s Health Care Platform
Supporting the Affordable Care Act (ACA) is the bedrock of Mr. Biden’s health care platform, with much of the platform’s priorities focusing on boosting its efficacy and building on the law’s public health successes. The platform also explores ideas to lower prescription drug costs by importing them from other countries, capping consumer health care spending and launching a “Medicare-like” public option. Undocumented immigrants would be able to buy into the public option but would not be able to receive governmental subsidies.

The Biden-Sanders Health Policy Recommendations
The new recommendations build on Mr. Biden’s existing platform, providing additional implementation details for many of the original ideas. These do not include a proposal to provide Medicare for all. According to the new document, the public option would require that patients be shielded from out-of-pocket prescription costs and allow Americans to be eligible for Medicare once they reach 60. The recommendations also include policy priorities for the environment, the workforce and infrastructure.

Priorities for the COVID-19 Pandemic
Should the current public health emergency last into 2021, the newly released health platform also includes recommendations related to the pandemic. A special enrollment period would be launched, allowing individuals to purchase coverage on the ACA’s Health Insurance Exchanges.
The plan also suggests that the federal government cover the cost of individuals retaining their health benefits under the existing continuation of health coverage policies.

Site Neutral Payments Update: Appeals Court Upheld Cuts

Last week, the U.S. Court of Appeals upheld HHS' payment cuts to hospital off-site outpatient departments for clinic visits, reversing last year's decision by a lower court. The appeals court ruled that the cuts do not have to be budget neutral because they were made to control unnecessary increases in the volume of covered outpatient services. This ruling comes as another loss to hospitals who are already dealing with the COVID-19 pandemic. The American Hospital Association is still reviewing the decision and deciding on next steps.
